Again, They that dance hreak that promise and agreement they made with God in baptism, when their godfathers promise for them, That they shall renounce the devil and all his pomp: for dancing is the pomp of the devil; and he that danceth maintaineth his pomp, and singeth his mass. For the woman that singeth in the dance, is the prioress, or chiefess of the devil, and those that answer are the clerks, and the beholders are the parishioners, and the music are the bells, and the fiddlers the ministers of the devil. For, as when hogs are strayed, if the hogherd call one, all assemble themselves together; so the devil causeth one woman to sing in the dance, or to play on some instrument and presently gather all the dancers together. Again, In a dance, a man breaks the Ten Commandments of...
