RENTFROW 9 bomber formations and position his pursuit aircraft accordingly. Once this domino fell, others followed. Fighter aircraft finally developed engines and armament that allowed them to climb, chase, and fight successfully with the heavy behemoths. Antiaircraft weaponry developed proximity fuses for their shells, which made them deadly to the bomber formations. By 1939 even General Arnold was pressing for the development of a long-range escort fighter for bomber formations, but by then it was too late. Eighth Air Force bombers would have to sustain heavy losses before the Air Corps could deliver them fighters capable of protecting them from the enemy defenders. One would think that these lessons, written in blood, would be an example of what was to be avoided in the future - a template of how not to close the minds of the service to pragmatic viewpoints; but it was not to be. The organizational culture that had been built on the theory of strategic bombing was unable to define itself in any other terms. As soon as the war ended, US Army Air Forces leadership began to put distance between themselves and the fact that the unescorted strategic bomber had met with only limited success, at the cost of very heavy casualties. In The United States Strategic Bombing Surveys, among the exuberant proclamations of the success of airpower, the reader finds one tiny paragraph that mentions that fighter aircraft might have been a problem: Until then it had been believed that unescorted bombers, heavily gunned and fly-ing in well designed formations, could...
