G. VVILLIAMS. As remarked by his esteemed friend who was near him in his expiring moments---the Lord, who has always some wise design in the various operations of his providence, obviously, removed him from them at that critical time, a striking demonstration of the vanity of earthly pursuits, in order to deepen those impressions made on the minds of many, especially the young, and to arrest the attention of others unconcerned about their eternal state, absorbed by present interests and present enjoyments. And the effect produced on the minds of many of John s young friends, at the time of his death, proved not like the morning cloud and early dew: a number of them, soon after, united with the church, and continued to adorn their profession by consistent lives. The melancholy event will be long remembered, and spoken...
