Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Commerce Between the United States and Mexico: A Report in Reply to a Resolution of the House of Representatives of January 31, 1884 The United States and Mexico, although territorially contiguous, have heretofore been in a commercial sense widely separated, from the fact that an intervening belt of more than one thousand miles in width, without transportation facilities has separated the centers of commerce and industry of the two countries. But within the last three years enterprises have been inaugurated and pushed forward, whereby the United States and Mexico will soon be placed in close communication by means of that most forceful agency of modern enterprise, the railroad. The advent of this important change in the commercial relations of the two countries is at hand. In a few weeks the first of the trunk lines designed to connect the two countries will be opened for traffic, and it is probable that within two years from the present time, three or four other lines with their branches will have been so far advanced toward completion as...
